Wherever you are in your career, cinfo can support you. Finding your place in international cooperation starts with knowing yourself: use these questions to reflect more deeply and find the information you need.

What do you understand by the term “international cooperation”?

What kind of activity and employer are you looking for?

Do you want to work:
- on a subject of interest to you?
- close to beneficiaries or at HQ?
- for an NGO, a development bank or another type of employer?

Are you willing to work and live abroad?

Do you have what it takes?
- What do you enjoy doing, and do you have the necessary skills?
- Stress and uncertainty management | Field of expertise | Perseverance | Experience (abroad) | Languages | High level of qualification

What draws you to this field of work?

Being based at the HQ in Bern or New York is not the same as being based in a fragile context. Have you considered the implications for your safety and comfort, and that of your family?

Need some orientation? Take part in our reflection day or talk to one of our coaches.

Start by informing yourself on our Panorama!

Find out what factors matter to you with a self-assessment.

Looking for an education programme? Here is a list of courses. Check out our list of entry positions!

Tempted to apply?
Have you considered the above questions and understood what employers are seeking? Do you match the position? Do you know how to write an application and prepare for an interview?
- Get inspired by the vacancies on cinfoPoste and create your own profile. Have you heard about UNYV and JPO programmes in multilateral organisations?
- We can support you in your application process – get in touch!